Inclusive Economies: A Multi-Dimensional Framework for Understanding, Measuring and Promoting Inclusive Economies

Rockefeller Foundation's Bellagio Conference Center

March 12-16, 2018

Bellagio, Italy

Meeting Purpose and Goals: Promoting inclusive economies has become an important theme in international policy discussions, but there remain major gaps in our understanding of the components and determinants of greater economic inclusion. Thus, the purpose of this meeting is to help contribute to the development of a multi-dimensional framework for understanding, measuring and promoting inclusive economies. Discussions will center on issues raised in the draft report summarizing two years of detailed research and convenings with stakeholders designed to develop a robust method for measuring progress in five key dimensions: equity, growth, participation, stability and sustainability. This work has included developing national indicators as well as detailed sub-national analysis in three contexts (cities in Colombia, rural states in India, and metropolitan regions in South Africa) but will also incorporate detailed work on inclusive development in the United States. Participants will bring their own experiences and perspectives to bear in helping us all better answer the following questions: What do we mean by the term inclusive economy? How can we better measure an inclusive economy? How can we get a more inclusive economy?
